

Business/Computer Information Systems Division

Interactive Multimedia Certificate of Competency

The Interactive Multimedia Certificate program prepares working professionals to develop computer-based training applications that employ a variety of audio and visual media including graphics, video and animation. The program trains a practitioner who can present information in an interesting and compelling fashion, who can design and develop animations, and who can create two or three-dimensional art for training videos or trade show displays, or for a company's web page. The program also provides the practitioner with the knowledge to determine the best format to use in a presentation, to decide what delivery mechanism (print, online, video) to use, to determine the desired result, and to measure whether the result has been achieved.

The certificate program prepares working professionals for a job as a Project Director, Multimedia Designer, Animator, Video Specialist, Instructional Designer or Production Assistant.

For information about the application process, please call the Admissions Office at (610) 359-5050.
